The Third Annual Heber Valley Piano Festival was a huge success this year. Seventy-four piano students from the Valley were critiqued in eight categories: Piano Composition, Music Theory, Sight Reading, Baroque/ Classical Performance, Romantic/ Contemporary Performance, Pop/ Jazz Performance, Duet Performance, and Accompaniment. All participants received Certificates of Achievement, 32 received medals for participating in all of the categories, and five students were awarded "Outstanding Musician" trophies for receiving the highest rating of "superior" in six out of the eight categories.

Comments heard from parents, teachers, and pianists included, "Very well organized." "I'm impressed!", and "The piano booth was neat." Festival Chairman Marie Patterson stated, "We wanted to get away from the competition aspect this year. Students were not judged in relation to other players, but according to their ages and length of study. Potentially, everyone could have received the highest rating of 'superior' in each category. We wanted students to challenge and compete against themselves and to do the best they could. We are very proud of all participants for giving it their best effort."

To add another dimension to the Festival this year, a piano information booth was provided by Wasatch Piano Works. The booth had a hands-on table, which included a demonstration upright piano action, as well as other parts of the piano that are never seen. Also, at the booth, was a large selection of informative pamphlets, books, and professional piano technology journals. Festival Co-Chairman, Nora Spatcholts, owner of Wasatch Piano Works, explained "I wanted to share my knowledge of the piano with those who play it yet know very little about their instrument. People don't general get a chance to see how a piano works; all they know is that they push a key down and a sound comes out. I wanted to show what happens inside the piano when a key is pushed down, and to demonstrate how complex an instrument the piano really is."

Another change from previous years was the use of BYU music students as judges instead of the area teaches. "We felt it would be more beneficial to have outsiders critique the playing, providing another point of view for the students and enriching or reinforcing what their teachers have been telling them in their lessons," said Marie Patterson. "We have had a lot of positive comments about the judges," added Nora Spatcholts, "and we certainly appreciate them sharing their time and expertise with us. We couldn't have done it without them!"

The Festival Chairman and Co-Chairman would like to thank all of those people who helped out this year. If anyone would like to help in next year's Festival, contact Nora Spatcholts at 654-1904.
